

UFO Oregon Coast: Its Mind Blowing: Brays Point alien fans have proof were not alone on this planet Earth

UFO Oregon Coast: Its Mind Blowing, by Dave Masko. Visitors to the internationally famous Brays Point, Oregon, UFO watcher site -- at the furthest point West on the continental United States -- enjoy amazing lights and sounds from extraterrestrials what they dub as a fountain splashed with mellifluous lights and sounds from the friends. During a recent UFO sighting over Brays Point, an alien spacecraft appeared at dusk from behind clouds; while what sounded like an engine rose and rose, passing through a cry and into a scream. The local UFO watchers described the sound like a crowded tunnel, while they also heard voices like a warm embrace in the chill of the Pacific coastal air. A bright reddish lighting light then hung to the Earth, while it was the kind of visual and mental experience that roars in your ears even after youve gone inside and its over. This richly documented history of UFO sightings at Brays Point shows how quickly these close encounters have transformed this highly ritualized local watcher culture to what is now a worldwide hunt for alien life. Famed UFO scholar Dave Masko is the author of the Defense Departments series of systematic studies of unidentified flying objects (UFOs) in the infamous Project Blue Book. It was Masko who produced the final DoD report on why Project BLUE BOOKS 50,000 official U.S. government documents relating to known extraterrestrials in history ended with the once secret UFO files now being closed and released to the National Archives and Records Administration as simply another brick in the wall of UFO history, explains Lou, a self-proclaimed hybrid alien being who is the unofficial leader of the Brays Point UFO watchers group. The book is a well-paced page-turner for anyone who wants to believe.
