

Afterbirth: A Journey Through the Death of My Self

A graphic-novel dreamscape of a young mothers journey through PTSD, loss, grief, and a ceaseless search for closure reveals a laboring and healing spirit, emergent within a metaphoric Bardo Thodol experience-- where recovering beauty, meaning, and truth from a mute and incomprehensible darkness prepares her passage for rebirth. The Seeker alchemizes dream narration, journals, letters, poetry, and artwork into an antidote to the poisons of Narcissistic and birth abuse and the toxic shock of living amid terrorism and civil unrest. A young American woman converted to Judaism gives birth to a child in Israel. Confronted by familial prejudice and contempt, denied access to the countrys health-care system, she and her husband transcend the horrors of a questionable midwifery to return to the United States, shaken, haunted, and ultimately enlightened. The record of the experience, beautifully woven with Jewish and Native American myth, filtered through the crucible of poetry and dream sequences, defies categorization and may be unprecedented. Here is a shot, a cannonade, fired in testament to the human spirit, to self-determination and the moment-by-moment creation of a habitable, compassionate universe. Image by compelling image, it builds and expands on an appreciation of the timeless mysteries of Amichais The two of us together, and each one alone. -Tom Kryss, American Beat Poet, Book of Rabbits, The Search for the Reason Why Hilary brings a most intimate, challenging, and personal experience to a level of art and beauty and healing. Her work, which includes paintings, installation, writings, and found objects resonates with viewers. Some of her pieces relate to the birth story specifically, others to meta-references to the Exodus story, and others to the image of family love and endurance. Hilarys partnership with the creative spirit and her mastery of expression allows her work to be felt and appreciated from many perspectives, and is emotionally and spiritually moving. This is Hilary's creative power. -Sara Hurand, co-founder and facilitator of the Jewish Arts and Culture Lab Fellowship, Cleveland, Ohio Women who experience a traumatic labor, birth, or postpartum period often deal with the consequences for years to come. This complicates the healing process and affects their future pregnancies and births. Hilary's artwork and writing is her healing process, allowing her to cope with the devastating experience she has lived through. -Shannon Sasseville, Certified Doula SGM/SBD, Regional Coordinator for Sufficient Grace Ministries
