

Ski-Ing: For Beginners and Mountaineers (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Ski-Ing: For Beginners and Mountaineers The foremost authorities on ski-running - Hoek, Paulcke, Richardson, and Zdarsky - may be said to own a common fund of knowledge which it would be invidious to attempt to distribute in detail. I am the pupil of one, have collaborated with two and exchanged ideas, held discussions and furrowed the snow with all of them. Nothing could be simpler or more just than to acknowledge them as contributors to the present volume. I have endeavoured to supplement their works in certain directions; I cannot improve upon them. To my teacher Zdarsky I owe much that cannot be adequately expressed in cold print. He introduced me to the delights of ski-ing, and with his ideas I have been so closely associated that my method must perforce be a plagiarism of his own in many respects. Special thanks are due to the publishers who allowed me to quote textually, and who have placed illustrations at my disposal: Eduard Lammers (Hoek, Der Ski) and Horace Cox (Somerville, Rickmers and Richardson, Ski-running).
