

120 Days to Freedom: Reflections on finding the Way out of addiction

Barbara Cueto has indeed been there, done that, as she honestly and poignantly revealed in her autobiography, From Mafia Princess to Gods Princess. Her life was consumed with excess. Barbara believed, as many do, that drugs, sex, alcohol, and materialism could free her from debilitating memories and crippling bitterness. Of course, these temporary fixes were the polar opposites of the wholeness, peace, and freedom that she desperately craved. When she finally recognized her helplessness and gave control of her life to Jesus Christ, He showed her, bit by bit, the Way to true liberty. Through this process, which God compelled her to share in 120 Days to Freedom, Barbara found that her limitations stemmed from relying on her own abilities, but her new strength arose through surrendering to God entirely, which in turn allowed Him to do His miracle work of restoration in her. Today Barbara has been substance free for nearly 25 years and serves Jesus Christ in many capacities. She continues to gain more and more freedom even as He continues to draw her nearer and nearer to Him.
