

This Sugar Is Coated with Quinine!

During his own fruitful marriage, Charles Eberonwu has witnessed the tumultuous stories of many peoples marital upheavals and the alarming rate at which families break up, resulting in the disasters of stressed single parents and distraught children caught between opposing forces. In This Sugar Is Coated with Quinine! Mr. Eberonwu explores the tribulations of Ken and Helen, a couple whose marriage is in dire trouble, only to come to the conclusion that with sacrifice, tolerance, and perseverance, every marital problem eventually expires, leaving the couples the best of friends. Marriage, Mr. Eberonwu asserts, like any other worthwhile human endeavor, comes with challenges that need to be confronted with a positive attitude. He compares giving up and quitting to a student who drops out of school because some courses are difficult and their lecturers hard to please. The key to marital success, as Mr. Eberonwu demonstrates, through Ken and Helens story (a story stunningly similar to that of their near relatives), lies in the partners mutual commitment to their bond-most especially when children are involved.
