

Excerpt from The Treatment and Care of the Insane in Pennsylvania There are more than eighteen thousand indigent insane in Pennsylvania. Less than eleven thousand of these unfortunates are cared for in State Hospitals. Yet these State Hospitals afford practically the only opportunity in the State of Pennsylvania for a public mental case to receive active medical treatment directed to the alleviation or cure of mental disease. In so many of the local hospitals and almshouses the insane are accorded precisely the opposite of the remedial treatment which they should receive. Instead of care they are neglected. Instead of wholesome and varied food they receive ill prepared and unfit diet, and often very scanty at that. Instead of the full view of the sky they have the board fence, or worse, surrounding the Exercise Yard. Instead of freedom they have the hand-cuff or the strait-jacket. No class of persons, sick or well, more need regulated occupation and exercise and open air work, such as farm work and plenty of room, than the insane. They need all that well people need to keep them well, plus the best medical care and treatment. Locked up, out of sight, neglected, forgotten, their misery cannot be told. The strongest in physical health and mental vigor would break down if subjected to the treatment which several thousand of our insane fellows in the State of Pennsylvania continue to suffer needlessly. As long ago as 1870 the late Mr. George L. Harrison, then President of the State Board of Charities, advocated the establishment by the State, within a reasonable time, of sufficient accommodation for the maintenance and treatment of all the insane who may not be cared for in private hospitals.
