

Japan Versus China in the Industrial Race

Why has Japanese industrialization been so much faster than that of China? The relative economic development of Japan and China from similar 19th-century conditions are examined in broad philosophical, social, political and historical perspective. The book challenges a common assumption that Chinese Confucianism does not encourage modernization, while Japanese Confucianism propelled for industrialization forward. It examines further reasons why Max Webers judgement, the Chinese would be probably more capable than the Japanese, of assimilating capitalism, has not been borne out.
