

Why Play Golf in West Africa

An amateur golfer and avid globe trotters visit to Ghana, Togo, Benin, Gabon and Sierra Leone, playing in regional and Open Golf National Country Tournaments. These exciting tournaments take place among the rainforest, animal life and slave history of Ghana, the journey by bus across the Atlantic ocean to Togo where the nine nation tournament was played. Here one visits the largest Voodoo market in the world with all the cults of fetish gods, an if willing meets with the Voodoo chief. Benin holds the intrigue apart from the most unusual golf course in the world of a Stilt Village of 30,000 people built on a lake by the small nations largest city. Once again we encounter the horrors of the slave history in Ouidah and the gate of no return. For an A grade amateur golfer to play the Gabon Open 54 holes along with 20 pros is a dream of any golfer. This was coupled with seeing amazing wood carved by 5 artists from the W. African region of the beautiful hardwood which grows there. Sierra Leone, the last country visited, is known for all the wrong reasons. Most recently the heart of the Ebola crisis was equally fascinating in playing golf on browns instead of greens, visiting the incredible beaches and sites of this almost forgotten country by tourists. The story ends by a comparison of the 5 countries GDP and how these communities survive happier than most other communities in the developed world. A comparison is also made of the writers life in Australia in the 50s and 60s where also there was a survival spirit and where children still made their own toys. The proceeds of this book will go equally to the Ebola Fund fund for W. Africa and to the women who are still living in Haitian camps displaced by the 2010 earthquake. This ministry was established by Laura Simms, the notorised New York story teller.
