

Old Norriton Presbyterian Church is a lovely stone structure at the corner of Germantown Pike and Trooper Road in East Norriton Township, Montgomery County, Pennsylvania. It is open occasionally for special worship services and recitals on the 19th century Krauss organ. For years its supporters have claimed that the congregation was organized in 1678 and the meeting house built in 1698 by seventeenth century Dutchman squatting on Indian land. This colorful tradition lingers despite the preponderance of evidence of a quite different history. The author has gone to the original documents of the synods and presbyteries and assemblies of the Presbyterian Church as well as the early documents of the township and its citizens to tell the true story of this interesting sentinel of a remarkable past.
