

Per aiutare il padre malato di cuore, dopo aver lasciato il college, April si vede costretta a lavorare nell'attività di famiglia, un'officina meccanica nel Queens. Il suo più grande sogno è diventare attrice, sperando così di dare un senso alla propria vita, e magari guadagnare per fare curare il padre in strutture adeguate. La sua occasione arriva quando, a causa di circostanze impreviste, viene scelta per interpretare Jo March in una rappresentazione teatrale di Piccole Donne a Manhattan, organizzata dalla famosa compagnia Lancelot, diretta dall'affascinante Edward Tucker, il quale sembra fin da subito provare un evidente interesse per lei. Ma l'ambiente del teatro e del cinema non è come April si aspettava: ben presto, comprende che dovrà lottare assiduamente, per non soccombere all'invidia degli altri membri della compagnia teatrale. Per caso conosce Joe, e ne rimane affascinata: un ragazzo cresciuto nel Bronx, ribelle e determinato, che si allena nella palestra vicino alla sede Lancelot, sperando di diventare un pugile professionista. Tra April e Joe nasce una forte amicizia, e cominciano a sostenersi a vicenda, per realizzare ognuno il proprio sogno. Quando capiscono di provare qualcosa l'uno per l'altra, si scontrano con la dura realtà, e la loro passionale storia d'amore viene intralciata dall'ambiente teatrale, pieno di raccomandazioni e ingiustizie, e quello corrotto e duro della boxe. Puncher è un romance piccante e coinvolgente, con due protagonisti molto indipendenti e appassionati. Un romanzo che narra di un amore forte e istintivo, intralciato dalla vita reale, che lotta per realizzarsi in un mondo corrotto e sporco, in cui i sogni sono l'unico modo per sopravvivere.
