

Recollections of Nettleton, and the Great Revival of 1820 [1848]

A brief narrative by the Rev. Ralph Smith, who was himself converted under the awakening of the Holy Spirits working in New York through the ministry of Mr. Nettleton. He was personally acquainted with many individuals and churches in that state who were also awakened and positively affected by the revivals in and around the year 1820. Some of their stories, along with assessments of Mr. Nettleton's character and methods, are given in this short account.--Considered by many as the most useful Christian evangelist in American history. He was a contrast to the new measures which developed under the leadership of Charles Finney and his followers. These Recollections provide a record of true God-given revival in several localities and the God-honoring methods employed.--A sketch of the great evangelist by his friend J. B. Waterbury has been appended to this edition.--160 pages.
