

In 1948, flying saucers had ruled the skies over Southwestern United States for over a year. The military investigated and fighter pilots were told to shoot them down. The military had already messed up a recovery mission during the previous year at Roswell and did not plan to let it happen again. During a confrontation in the air over Texas, military jets may have shot down one of these flying saucers, which crashed in the Mexican desert. A military rescue ensued and the body of an alien was recovered. Over 60 years later, the whole affair is still shrouded in mystery.
