

Venusian Seed

The subjects of where the human race and life on Earth are headed arouse great and passionate contemporary interest as the effects of environmental abuse and greed become increasingly apparent. Stephen Skinner posits the theory that Venus was the first planet to be inhabited by a race ultimately driven to Earth by the rising heat and noxious fumes engulfing their own home. A highly evolved people, they arrived here at a time when the earthling race was in its infancy. The two races mated with each other, and the Venusian seed was thus planted in our race. Skinners theory takes us through the sweep of the millennia since the birth of Christ, via Ancient Egypt and the Salem witch trials, bringing us up to the uncertain present and offering up suggestions on how we and our bodily spirit can best live and prepare for the time when our own world meets the fate that Venus once did, and how we will prosper in the next one.
